“Beyond right and wrong, there is a field. I will meet you there.”

Rumi

After Solidarity is an immersive playspace for adults where imagination is a political act. Artist and choreographer Grace Euna Kim presents this new participatory performance in cooperation with de_colonialanguage. Audience are invited to explore the co-creation of a post-ideological future, leading into a collective discussion and sharing of reflections.

As anti-migrant tensions are ever more on the rise across Germany and Europe, the encounter is grounded in questions of how conflict-based ideologies are inscribed within bodies and the possibilities to transform them.

- How can we imagine a world beyond violence, when we are embedded in the systems that reproduce it?
- How can we approach solidarity without producing other forms of exclusion?
- How can we enact resistance without producing other forms of oppression?

After Solidarity thus offers a space to explore ways of reclaiming lost futures and reworlding our relation to the “other”. We question how to manifest a peaceful co-existence—a post-violence radical future—amidst plural lived realities of injustice, fear, disagreement, and vulnerability.
